LONDON'S
Less Traveled Treasures

Experienced tour guide and Anglophile Linda Putnam will discuss a number of fascinating sites hovering right in the shadows of St. Paul's Cathedral:

- the locations of several other churches designed by Christopher Wren
- an ancient market site that was re-established during the height of Victoria's reign
- a Medieval water pump that unassumingly stands on the side of a busy London street
- the foundry that made our very own Liberty Bell as well as other famous bells

London's Less Traveled Treasures includes historic information on each site and points out social and architectural aspects of each location visited.
